COUNCIL FIRM ON LICENSES

Dothan May Have Cotton Exchange—Police Must Pay Damages, Says Council.

City council stood firm last night in its determination not to change the license schedule although several citizens appeared before that body and gave separate reasons why their licenses should be reduced. The reasons, from the standpoint of the petitioners, appeared to be logical, yet the council evidently did not want to "let the gap down" by giving one man relief while others had already paid privilege licenses for the year's business. W. R. Flowers, George Pileher and C. J. Lurie appeared before council asking for relief.

Cotton Exchange Coming.

Indications are that Dothan will have a cotton exchange with a private wire connecting with Atlanta, council having agreed to make the license $62.00 per year, the same as charged shippers. S. T. Aber of Doremus & Company address council, telling some of the things his company hopes to do. He said it would cost several thousand dollars to arrange a private wire to Atlanta, connecting with the New York Cotton Exchange. His company contemplates putting in the exchange.

Officer Must Pay.

City council passed a resolution to the effect that Police Officer Olliver Daugherty must pay Jeff Adkins $35 damages about a horse. Adkins horse and buggy was left loose in the streets one day and was taken to police headquarters. At headquarters Policeman Daugherty received a hurry call and having no other conveyance handy jumped into Adkins' buggy and drove off. The horse ran away and sustained injuries incapacitating the animal. Adkins sued the city and the officer jointly. Justice of

REVENUE BOARD WILL MEET TUESDAY

Now that the county has decided to spend a large sum of money for the construction of good roads there is hardly any doubt but what this question will be the leading theme of conversation at the meeting of the board of revenue Tuesday morning.

Not long since the board tentatively agreed upon a net work of good roads, which when completed will cover the county very thoroughly. These main trunk lines will connect the lesser tributaries thereby establishing a splendid chain of improved highways. No one knows yet just how much money will be expended but it is estimated that interest bearing warrants will be issued for as much as $75,000, maybe more.

Looks Over Route.

Probate Judge A. C. Crawford went to Columbia this morning and inspected a proposed road known as the Rocky Creek road. The judge says he enjoyed the trip.

Stage Johnnies Hit Hard Blow

Stage door Johnnies will not be allowed to hang around the stage doors at the city auditorium and occupants of the auditorium will not be permitted to smoke there, according to a resolution offered by Alderman Clem Ezell and adopted by city council last night.

The resolution provides a penalty. Those convicted of smoking in the auditorium balcony or gallery shall be fined not less than $5 nor more than $25. The same penalty applies to men caught loitering around the stage doors.

BILLION BUSHEL WHEAT CROP IS INDICATED NOW

Government Crop Reporting Board Gives Out Its Estimates.

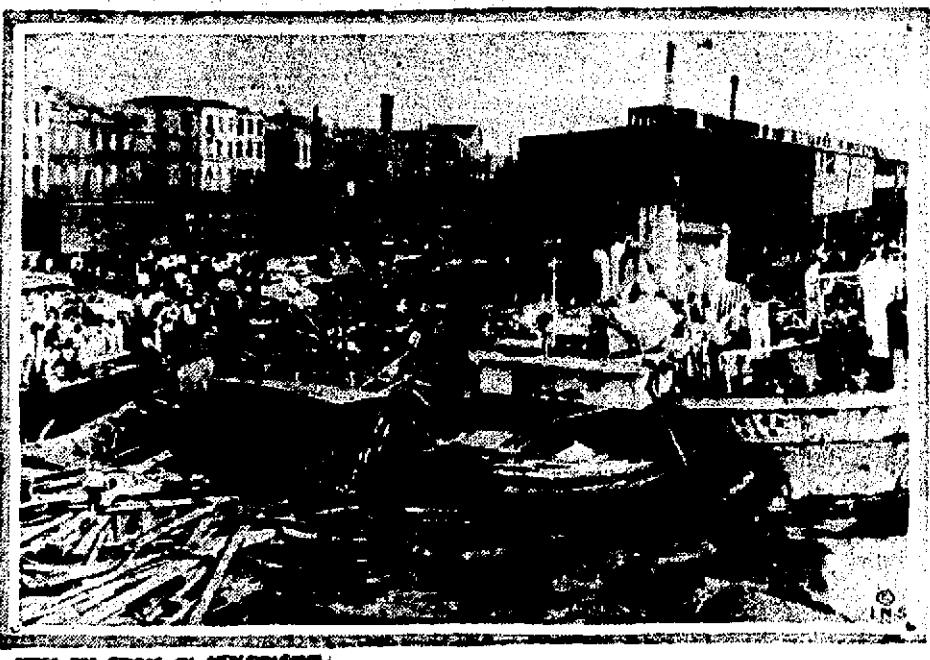

Washington, Oct. 7.—A billion bushel wheat crop, the greatest ever grown in any country, has been produced in the United States this year. The government's preliminary estimate of the great crop made today placed it at 1,092,023,000 bushels, or 511,000,000 bushels larger than the record crop in 1912.

The corn crop now approaching maturity is estimated at 3,026,150,000 bushels, or 98,000,000 bushels less than the record of 1912.

SCENE OF NEW ORLEANS WATERFRONT AFTER GREAT STORM.

The picture shows the wreckage of steamers driven into the wharves along the New Orleans waterfront after the recent hurricane in which hundreds were killed and millions of dollars damage done to property in the city.

Note the mass of timbers on the left which marks the remains of an old river steamer pounded to kindling by the raging wind and water, her paddle wheel alone remaining to identify her.

WOULD YOU ERADICATE THE BOLL WEEVIL?

By H. C. Van Horn.

Marvelous development in agriculture has taken place in the south in the past few years, but greater successes are undoubtedly in store for the future. The reduction in the production of cotton due to the rapid advance eastward of the boll weevil will eventually prove a blessing to disburse. Undoubtedly this will lead to a more diversified farming in which the raising of corn, wheat, oats, clover, vetch, alfalfa and livestock will play a tremendously important part. Wonderful agricultural opportunities lie in the south. The farmers of the south are progressive and in no other section have the benefits to be derived from diversifying been greater. Take corn as an instance. We have all heard of the tremendous yields made in various sections of the South—in the corn growing contests. Corn is a native of a tropical country, and as such is better adapted by nature to our climatic conditions than in the corn belt of the middle west. In fact in no other section of the country are the natural climatic conditions so favorable to its production.

In allowing the middle west to lead in the production of corn—the south has in a way sacrificed a birthright. Not only is it possible in the south, but it will produce more to the acre and furthermore the long season permits of producing two crops in one year. The essential factor in producing corn in greater quantity, and at less expense, consists in practicing soil building methods—to bring the land up to a high state of fertility; and selecting proper seed. Under favorable weather conditions it is possible to double, and in many instances more than double the usual yields. Land building is neither expensive or difficult; anyone can do it if he will.

The advantages of growing legume crops to renovate, improve and enrich the soil, also the high protein contents, and consequent rich food value of legumes have long been appreciated. But in order to grow legumes successfully and derive all these benefits, it is absolutely necessary that they be inoculated with the proper strain of nitrogen fixing bacteria. This has all been amply demonstrated by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, by State Experiment Station and by practical experience on the part of farmers in all parts of the country. It has been known for many years that legume plants left the land more fertile, instead of poorer. But it is only in more recent years that we have learned the reason why, and because it is a natural means and entails no great expense, the enrichment of the soil by means of the activities of these bacteria is available to all of us. There is no occasion for buying expensive commercial nitrates. When you can secure all you need by growing legumes. Cow peas are probably the most generally grown throughout the south, but how many of us are deriving the fertilizing benefit from this crop that it is capable of giving us. The study of the relation between crops, soil and bacteria has progressed sufficiently to warrant the interest of every progressive farmer. Only the pod-bearing or legume plants are capable of using atmospheric nitrogen, the better known of which are peas, beans, clover, vetches and alfalfa, but even these plants have no power to obtain nitrogen from the air unless they are provided with the proper nitrogen gathering bacteria.

In general agriculture, whether it be wheat, cotton, corn, potatoes, live stock or dairy farming, the growing of legumes is a part of any economic system which shall maintain the fertility of the soil and for the successful growing of legumes the presence and assistance of the proper species of bacteria are also absolutely necessary. Nitrogen is the one element which we cannot afford to allow to be taken out of the soil without having it added again.

By growing legumes we need not fear the soil's depletion of this element. By growing legumes in rotation with our soil-robbing crops, the land would become more fertile because of the increase of nitrogen, and therefore more valuable. Here in Alabama, we are confronted by cotton's worst enemy, the boll weevil. There is but one effective means of eradicating him that is practical, and that is by starvation. All sorts of plans have been tried, and here in Alabama the farmers can profit by the mistakes of others. The weevil is going to stick around as long as he can find cotton, and he is more than likely to harvest most of the crop in spite of all our efforts to beat him to it.

Alabama is particularly fortunate in having at her service one who is probably the leading authority on the boll weevil in this country. Dr. Hinds was fighting and making a special study of the pest years before most Alabamians ever saw one. Many of you have heard what Dr. Hinds and Mr. White have to say on this matter and were told that no remedy has proved so successful as diversification, the raising of grain, meat, fruits and food stuffs is our most efficient weapon. A small acreage in cotton, that can be handled properly, is desirable. According to Dr. Hinds 10 acres to the plow should be the limit, but a one crop system as practiced in the past is no longer practical.

In the production of meat it is recognized that a comparatively large proportion of protein is required in the feed. Where this can be obtained from the roughage or home grown forage it can be had at much less expense than if purchased in the form of concentrates. If we grew more clover and other winter crops, and more peas and beans in summer to plow under we could easily replace the nitrogen out of the soil without hav-

GERMANS SUSTAIN HEAVY LOSSES

Furious Counter Assaults Are Launched in Effort to Take Tatars.—Kaiser's Lines Pierced.

Berlin, Oct. 7.—German troops have penetrated Russian positions at Dvinsk, on a three mile front.

Paris, Oct. 7.—Tremendous losses were sustained by the Germans in efforts to retake from the French the positions captured by them in the Champagne yesterday, according to an official communique issued by the French war office today.

Furious counter assaults were launched by the Germans in an effort to drive back the French forces that captured Tatars, northeast of Soisson.

All these attacks were repulsed, the Germans leaving many dead and wounded upon the field.

The most violent efforts were made by the Germans to dislodge the French from Tatars hill from which point the French guns command the Bazancourt-Challerange railway.

Pierce Kaiser's Lines.

Paris, Oct. 7.—By capturing the Germans' massive fortifications at Tatars, French troops have pierced the Kaiser's lines on a front of more than five miles and their guns now dominate the Challerange-Bazancourt railway. It is over this line that the German forces in the "bloody angle" formed by the Oise and Aisne have received most of their supplies and their position there has been rendered precarious by the latest French scheme.

The French artillery battered the Tatars fort and its neighboring defenses for six days before General Joffre ordered his infantry to advance. Within an hour the shattered fortifications were in the hands of the foot soldiers who dashed through the waters of L'Ornoise rivulet and ended with their bayonets the lives of all the Germans who resisted them.

Several companies of Tonton troops trapped in the deep concrete and steel fortifications surrendered without resistance.

Admit French Gains.

Berlin, Oct. 7.—Today's official report from the German war office admits that the French have gained ground in the Champagne, but declares that Field Marshal von Hindenburg's troops

C. OF GA. WILL EXHIBIT HERE

Railroad Company to Have A Splendid Exhibit at Dothan Fair.

Secretary F. Thomas of the Southeast Alabama Fair Association has received notification from J. F. Jackson, agricultural agent of the Central of Georgia Railway that the big tent exhibit of the road will be shown at the fair here October 25 to 30.

The exhibit will include a Percheron mare and colt, six head of short horn cattle, besides products from test farms and tobacco growers. This will no doubt prove a very interesting exhibit. The exhibit will be in charge of J. A. Winslow, tobacco culturist of the Central of Georgia Railway.

The Central of Georgia has expended quite an amount of money in recent years in order to improve the country and better conditions along the route of the road. The company realized that the success of the people who lived adjacent to the line meant a great deal to the road in that if they raised lots of products on the farm and shipped them that the railway would derive quite a bit of revenue in freights. The same applied to the live stock industry.

One of the contentions of the company has been that Southeast Alabama is adaptable to the growth of a new variety of tobacco and judging from what has been accomplished at the test farms there must be something in the contention.

have pierced the positions of the Russian troops at Dvinsk over a front of three miles.

At Tatars in the Champagne the French captured 800 yards of ground.

President John Sanders and Mrs. Sanders, Secretary F. Thomas and Mrs. Thomas, of the Southeast Alabama Fair Association, will leave Sunday morning for Birmingham to take in the State fair there.

At Birmingham Secretary Thomas will make an effort to interest horsemen in coming to the Dothan Fair, Oct. 25-30, with their horses, and will also endeavor to secure some of the leading acts he sees at the big show.

ECONOMY OF THE STATE

The Governor claims that the vetoing of the reuniting bills saved the state about $45,000.

It was the Governor who made the suggestion, if we mistake not, that the State was spending too much for feeding prisoners, and wanted some relief.

The legislature didn't see fit to reduce the feed bill for feeding prisoners, not at this session, because the sheriffs were elected under the impression that the feed bill would remain the same. One of the reasons for the reuniting bill was to get enough courts to get the prisoners out of jails and thereby stop hundreds of thousands of dollars the state is spending in feeding the prisoners.

If by vetoing the bill, the jails are to remain congested, it is doubtful whether saving the $45,000 is a saving, but may be the means of the state's spending twice or three times that amount for feeding prisoners lying in jail awaiting trial.

JULIAN DOESN'T LIKE ANY PART OF IT.

According to the legislative clocks the legislature adjourned at midnight Saturday last. The passing of the 1915 legislature will be a great relief to business throughout the state.

Entering upon the discharge of their duties in January, the members lost no time in getting down to work. Prohibition being the issue upon which a majority of the legislature had been elected, it was a foregone conclusion that state-wide prohibition would be enacted. This was accomplished in record time, five days. The act settled so quickly, predictions were freely made that the example set by the first work was indicative of a working body. However, the predictions failed.

A powerful outside lobby of corporation attorneys sailing under the guise of prohibition leaders, took charge of the further work of the legislature and nothing of importance was accomplished in the first session.

Recess committees were created. These committees visited all parts of the state. Returning in July, many subjects of legislation were presented by the members of the committee. Numbers of untired theories were written into bills and bills enacted into law.

Promises of retrenchment and reform were forgotten and the relief promised the people from heavy tax burdens can only be found in the untired laws passed.

The most expensive, the most arrogant and the most intensely partisan legislature ever assembled will, no doubt, be the consensus of opinion when the people fully realize the many ills arising from the work of this body.

More anon.—Frank N. Julian's paper, the Sheffield Standard.

The people of Alabama have been voting a state ticket with Frank Julian's name on it for some time. He made a good railroad commissioner, and this paper supported him, although it appeared that he made a "compromise" in the rate case that got his goat. The people didn't want to risk him again, although Julian has made an unusually efficient official in the various state offices he has held. When the proposed insurance department bill met with defeat in the legislature last spring all hopes were lost and Frank went back to his home county and went into the newspaper game again. Now, at a distance he has a right to criticize the actions of the legislature. The body didn't do what he wanted it to do. In the last session the department was created, but it seems the Governor didn't have as much confidence in Mr. Julian's administration ideas as he did others, hence another man was put at the head of the new insurance department.

Taken as a whole, Frank has been kindly dealt with by the people. One shouldn't expect to remain at the Capital once he has a position there. He ought to go back home at times and get in touch with the people, even if it's just running a newspaper, and Frank is one of the best newspaper men in Alabama, before politics soured his soul and curdled the milk of human kindness.

A GRUESOME SIDE OF WAR.

Commercial Appeal.

The demand on this country for artificial limbs brings before us another gruesome side of war. The maimed must be equipped with the means of applying themselves, as well as possible, for the future demands of life.

Each nation has asked or commanded its bravest and best sons to lay down their lives for their country. Thousands have done so. The total death toll will never be known. They are at least at rest. They will not be troubled with the problem of how the future is to be lived.

The helpless army of cripples, having survived the shot and shell of the enemy, has this problem to consider.

Governments cannot be expected to do much. The question of pensions cannot be considered now. The best that can be done is to supply these unfortunates with substitutes for the limbs they have lost.

One American firm, with headquarters in Pittsburgh, and branches in Washington, St. Louis and Atlanta, has closed a contract for $15,000,000. Think of it, fifteen million dollars to be expended in the purchase of limbs for the soldiers who have so far supplied the conflict. This is not all, for other contracts are expected. France and England have urged that the shipment of artificial limbs be as rapid as possible. The result is that these manufacturers are working day and night and expect to turn out from one thousand to fifteen hundred limbs a month. Artificial limbs will be shipped in the rough and will be finished in the finishing plants of the company in Paris and London, where they will also be fitted.

The two nations have also asked American manufacturers to bid on a contract for an additional 200,000 artificial limbs. These figures will indicate what the result of the war in France and England has been to the living. The dead need not be discussed.

Germany is making her artificial limbs at home, where there are a number of well equipped factories that began the work before the war began.

Artificial legs cost about seventy-five dollars each. The enormous expense that will be added to the cost of war can quickly be appreciated.

While the governments must pay, think of what the maimed survivors pay to make their way in the days to come.

UGLY FACTS.

By Walt Mason in Emporia Kan, Gazette.

"My next door neighbor, Jabez Leverage, was buried yesterday," said the retired merchant. "Nobody had any use for him while he was alive, but when he cashed in people began sending flowers, and everybody had a good word to say of him. What a hollow mockery that sort of thing is!"

"I suppose it does look that way to the careful analyst," replied the hotel keeper, "but there's no use moralizing over such things. Every time a man has a classy funeral, people begin pointing out that nobody lavished much affection on him when he was alive. When a man's alive he is supposed to be able to buy his own American Beauties. But when he's dead he's comparatively helpless, and has to depend on his friends for nosegays and buttonhole bouquets."

"There's some satisfaction in showing kindness to a man after he's cashed in, for unpleasant consequences are not likely to bother you. But it's never safe to be too kind when he's living. Now, I sent a beautiful wreath out to Leverage's house when I heard he had expired. A number of his relatives came to town to attend the obsequies, and when they saw that wreath they made up their minds to stay at this hotel. Honest to-jon, I wasn't fishing for business when I sent the wreath, but you see how doing a kindness to a dead man brings results."

"Probably there were grumpy people present, who regarded that beautiful wreath with scorn and uttered the usual guff about sending flowers to a man when it's too late for him to appreciate them. People think they are handing out a fine line of irony when they talk that way, but the truth is there was more satisfaction in doing a kindness to Leverage dead, than to Leverage living."

"He was an old snail, and a tinker, and was always getting out injured us whenever public improvements were under way. He made himself so unpopular that everybody was jumping on him with spiked shoes, and he seemed so friendless that I felt sorry for him. The newspapers were roasting him every day, so one evening I took my fountain pen in hand and wrote an article in his defense. I didn't believe a word I was writing, for I hadn't any use for Jabez Leverage; but I always had a weakness for helping the under dog."

"I sent the article to one of the newspapers and it was printed, and made me almost as unpopular as Jabez was. Well, I guess it, I didn't know what I was letting myself in for when I wrote that article. Jabez was just suffering for sympathy, pulling away for somebody who wouldn't turn a deaf ear when he explained his position, and he made this hotel his headquarters for several weeks. He would follow me all over the house, explaining that he really was a public spirited citizen, and he was merely trying to rescue the taxpayers from their own folly when he applied for restraining orders every time the street commissioner started in to repair a sidewalk."

"He hored me so long and so persistently that I finally took my pen in hand once more, and wrote another article, retracting all I had said in the previous one, and holding Jabez up to public scorn as a sort of war on the body politic."

"It's never safe to do a kind-ural wear and waste of humus from our soils, and make it profitable at the same time. By means of the beef, milk and pork we could also produce from these crops. Nitrogen is used by most plants in greater quantities than any of the other soil elements. It is easily lost from the soil and is usually the first element to become deficient. It is the most expensive element (per unit) when purchased in the form of commercial fertilizers.

By the aid of the Mulford cultures for inoculating legumes, we are not only enabled to produce certain kinds which we are not now growing, but also enable those we are now growing, to store up in the soil for the benefit of our money crops all the nitrogen these crops may need. As has often been pointed out, our average yields of corn, cotton and oats are entirely too low. How to increase the yield without increasing the expense has been the difficult problem. The solution lies in legumes.

Sow clover or vetch in your cotton land this fall, either alone for pasture or with rice, wheat or oats, for pasture and hay. If sown with grain the yield will be increased. The legumes will feed nitrogen to the grain while growing, also adding greatly to the value of the hay. This method of soil-building by aid of legumes, means cheaper corn or other crops for next spring. If you inoculate your soil and sow legumes, the result will be increased fertility and consequent reduction in the cost of fertilization. Crimson or bur clover and hairy vetch represent your cheapest means of securing nitrogen, besides offering the best of pasture and hay.

Next season you can inoculate your peas, beans and peanut seed before sowing, it will cost you only about $1.00 per acre and you will gather a harvest of fertilizer from the air that will add to the value of your land from $15.00 to $30.00 per acre in nitrogen.

The time to sow winter legumes is right now in October. By all means get rid of those old cotton stalks and plant clover and vetch.

BOSTON IS ATTACKED
BY A "HOSTILE FLEET"

Boston, Oct. 7.—While the main part of the Atlantic fleet was engaged in war maneuvers along the Atlantic coast, a detachment of torpedoblast destroyers was detailed today to participate in a mimic attack on the coast defenses of Boston. The "war game" was entirely distinct from the larger operation. On the theory that "the enemy" had landed an army north of Boston and was prepared for a direct naval assault on the harbor defenses, the various forts were called upon to muster all their powers of defense.

Buoys, channel markers and lighthouse illuminations were theoretically removed to hamper the approach of the hostile fleet. Post Tonnies, 3 for 25c at Bush Grocery Co. Phone 28. 11

"THE FLOWERS."

"Take a feller 'at's sick and laid up on the shelf
All shaky and gaunted and pore,
Jes, all so knocked out he can't handle himself
With a stiff upper lip any more;
Shut up all alone in the gloom of a room

As dark as the tomb, and as grim
And then take him and send him some roses in bloom,
And you can have fun out of him.

"You've ketch'd him 'Tore now—when his liver was sound
And his appetite natch'd like a saw,
A-moeking you, maybe, for ro-mancein' 'round
With a big posey-bunch in yer paw;

But you ketch him say, when his health is away,
And he's flat on his back in distress,
And then you kin trot out yer little bakay
And not be insulted, I guess!

"You see, it's like this, what his weaknesses is—
Them flowers makes him think of the days
Of his innocent youth, and that mother of his,
And the roses that she ust to raise—

So here all alone with the roses you send—
Bein' sick and all trimbly and faint—
My eyes—my eyes is—my eyes is—old friend—
Is a-lenkin'—I'm blamed ef they ain't!"

Carefully Treat
Children's Colds

Most of children's colds often lay the foundation of serious lung trouble. On the other hand, it is harmful to continually dose delicate little stomachs with internal medicines or to keep the children always indoors.

Fresh air and a good application of Vick's "Vapo-Rub" Salve over the throat and chest at the first sign of trouble, will keep the little chaps free from colds without injuring their dispositions. 25c, 50c, or $1.00.
